

Photos by Master Sgt. Michael Casados

Commander's orientation tour shows off Wolf Pack firepower

(top) Maj. Tamara Holder, 8th Fighter Wing staff judge advocate, fires the M-60 machine gun as Staff Sgt. Sheldon Rees, 8th Security Forces Squadron combat arms instructor, observes her performance during the orientation tour for commanders here Aug. 17. Besides showing the new commanders and a few wing staff personnel the location of all the organizations here, another reason for the tour was to show them the environment and working conditions that other commanders deal with on a daily basis.

(bottom-right) Staff Sgt. Tim John, 8th SFS noncommissioned officer in charge of heavy weapons training, gestures towards the weapon showcase as he briefs tour members on the capabilities of the .50-caliber Browning machine gun, the 81 mm mortar and the M-60 machine gun.

(bottom-left) Nero, 8th SFS patrol dog, leaps for the arm wrap worn by 1st Lt. Scott Stevenson, 8th FW protocol chief, as Staff Sgt. Ronald Colbeck, 8th SFS dog handler controls the on-leash attack dog demo. The 8-year-old military working dog was the center of attention, along with his other canine partners, during this portion of the tour.